THE PORTABLE GENEALOGIST 3

Editorial Stylesheet

By Penny Stratton, Publications Expert at NEHGS

Introduction
There are many conventions for the presentation of genealogical information. It's important to be consistent in how you present people, and implement your overall style.

Whether you are writing in an ahmentafel format or a Register format, this guide will help you choose abbreviations, punctuation, and the like.

Style by Element
Depending on the format you choose, you may want to style by element or by type of narrative.

TOPICS

- Style by element
- Styles by type of narrative

Genealogical Numbering

By Penny Stratton, Publications Expert at NEHGS

Introduction
Genealogical writing uses a variety of numbering systems to identify individuals in your material and make your research easier to follow.

Building a Genealogical Sketch

By Penny Stratton, Publications Expert at NEHGS

Introduction
Genealogical writing typically follows a prescribed format, with data about a particular person or family presented in a precise, consistent way. If you're ready to turn your family history research into a publication, this "Portable Genealogist" will help you assemble a genealogical "sketch"—that is, help you write up a family group.

The basics are the same whether you are presenting your material in descendant format (Register style), beginning with an ancestor and moving forward in time, or as an ancestor table (ahmentafel), beginning at or near the present and tracing direct lines back to the earliest known ancestor.

If you are precise, clear, and consistent, your readers will thank you!

TOPICS

- Ancestor table numbering
- Register-style numbering
- Automatic numbering in Microsoft Word
- Generational numbering

THE PRIEST FAMILY

DEGORY PRIEST ARRIVED on the Mayflower in 1620 and died during the first winter. The rest of his family, who had remained in Leiden, Holland, soon came over to settle in the new Plymouth Colony and married into the Coombs family.

1. DEGORY¹ PRIEST was born in England about 1579. He died at Plymouth, Massachusetts, 1 January 1620/1, one of the many Pilgrims who died during the initial winter in Massachusetts. He may be the Digorius Prust, son of Peter and Joanna (Prust) Prust, baptized at Hartland, Devonshire, 11 August 1582. The given name (localized in certain parts of Devon and Cornwall) has been spelled many ways (Degory, Diggory, Dagoreus, etc.) since its appearance in the Middle Ages; it may commemorate an early local saint.⁶⁰⁹

He married at Leiden, Holland, 4 November 1611, after publishing intentions 8 October 1611, SARAH (ALLERTON) VINCENT. She was the sister of fellow Mayflower passenger Isaac¹ Allerton (see ALLERTON FAMILY), and widow of John Vincent. She died at Plymouth before 24 October 1633, when an inventory of her estate and that of her third husband was taken. She married third, at Leiden, 13 November 1621, Godbert Godbertson (also written Cuthbert Cuthbertson), by whom she had one son, Samuel.⁶¹⁰

Degory Priest arrived in Plymouth on the Mayflower, while his wife and daughters remained in Leiden. Bradford wrote of Priest [and others] that "All these dyed soon after their arrival, in the general sickness that befell. But Digerie Priest had his wife and children sent hither afterwards, she being Mr. Allerton's sister."

Sarah and her third husband, with her two daughters by Priest, arrived on the Anne in 1623.

The Pilgrims debarked the Mayflower at Plimoth Plantation in November 1620, and almost immediately were taken ill. By April 1621, nearly half of the original 102 passengers had died. Among those who perished were Degory Priest and Mary (Norris) Allerton, wife of Isaac Allerton (see ALLERTON FAMILY) and sister of Degory's wife. (See "That which was most sad and lamentable" at Plimoth Plantation.")

Children of Degory¹ and Sarah (Allerton) (Vincent) Priest, b. Leiden:⁶¹¹

- i. MARY² PRIEST, b. ca. 1613; d. Charlestown, Mass., bet. 7 March 1686/7 and 22 July 1689; m. Plymouth ca. 1630, PHINEAS PRATT, b. prob. England ca. 1593; d. Charlestown 19 April 1680. Phineas arrived at Damariscove Island in what is now Maine on the

6. ELIZABETH⁴ ROTCH (William³, Joseph², William¹) was born at Nantucket, 9th 12 mo. 1757.^[45] She died at New Bedford, 2 August 1856.^[46] She married at Nantucket, 1st 6 mo. 1780, SAMUEL RODMAN, son of Thomas and Mary (Borden) Rodman. He was born at Newport, 11 November 1753^[47] and died at New Bedford, 24 December 1835.^[48]

Elizabeth (Rotch) Rodman, along with her husband, were the impetus to so many of the meetings of the Society of Friends, most of them because of the women, the focus of which is in the next article. A vote that revoked Elizabeth's and Mary's position was what had taken place that he "tendered a resignation to the Mo[nthly] Meeting. He declined to do so, which had led to this step, which must be well known. He said it was not a hasty one, but taken after much deliberation. He should only request a copy of the minute made."

SECOND GENERATION

3. Sarah² George (Tabitha¹) was born at Mecklenburg County, Virginia, in 1856–58, to Tabitha and Durrell George.⁵⁸ She died probably in 1910–20.⁵⁹ Sarah married (1) Allen Alexander on 22 December 1875.⁶⁰ Allen died between 1900 and 1904, when Sarah, signing with a mark, borrowed money to purchase at least one horse or mule.⁶¹ As daughter of “Durrell & Tabby George,” Sarah married (2) on 18 March 1906, Mason Gayle.⁶²

Sarah and Allen had eight children.⁶³ Five have been identified:

- 15 i. ROBERT ALLEN³ ALEXANDER, born at Mecklenburg County on 28 January 1884;⁶⁴ living in 1900.⁶⁵
- 16 ii. LAURA ALEXANDER, born in April 1885. In name and age worked for a white family just before her parents' household.⁶⁶

At the beginning of the country's involvement in the Great War, Golder lived in Harlem at 42 East 133rd Street and worked as a porter for Park and Tilford, a specialty grocery store. He served briefly in the U.S. Army—only two and a half months at Camp Humphreys, Virginia.¹³² His short service and subsequent assignment to a “remedial training unit” suggest he was “socially incompatible for military service.”¹³³

Upon discharge Golder became a longshoreman.¹³⁴ The couple lived at 102 West 143rd Street and took in boarders, as did many families during this harsh

Ahnentafel Numbering

- The subject is number 1.
- The subject's father is always 2 and the mother 3.
- Paternal grandparents are 4 and 5; maternal are 6 and 7; etc.
- In every father-mother pair, the father has an even number and the mother an odd number.

Ahentaifel Math

- To calculate the father's number (n), double the child's number (cn)
 - $cn \times 2 = n$
- Add 1 to the father to establish the mother's number
 - $n + 1$
- To find the child of a couple, halve the father's number
 - $n \div 2 = cn$

The founder of the Lupton family fortune—William Lupton & Co., established in 1773, only ceased business in 1958—Arthur Lupton was educated in Frankfurt. (His elder brother established himself in Lisbon in the same period.) While in Germany Arthur befriended his schoolmaster's kinsman Johann Wolfgang von Goethe, who called him 'der junge Engländer,' noting that "Lupton is a good fellow, a marry inventious fellow as I see in his letter, which is wroten with a spirit of jest, much laudably moderated by the respect he owes to his master." Goethe added that in 1764–65 he had "much intercourse with a young Englishman, who was a student at Herr Pfeil's pension. He had a good knowledge of his own language; I used to practice it with him, and thereby learned much about his Country and people. My sister was often a third party in our English conversation. Thomas¹ Trowbridge (1677–1725) of Newton, Massachusetts, and Canterbury, Connecticut
George R. Nye

Thomas¹ Trowbridge was a man of some notoriety. However, he has long seemed to be an anomaly, as the English origins of the Trowbridge family in America are well documented⁶⁰ and three Trowbridge genealogies have been published: by Otis Trowbridge in 1854,⁶¹ by Reverend Frederick W. Chapman in 1872,⁶² and by Francis Bacon Trowbridge in 1908.⁶³

Thomas¹'s immigrant grandfather Thomas² Trowbridge of Taunton, Somerset, England, settled in Dorchester, Massachusetts, about 1636, with his wife, Elizabeth Marshall, and soon Thomas and William.⁶⁴ They had one additional child, James, who was born probably in Dorchester, Massachusetts, where his mother was a church member in 1636, and where James was baptized between 1637 and 1638.⁶⁵ Thomas¹'s family relocated to New Haven, Connecticut, before 1641, and by November 1641 Thomas had absented himself.⁶⁶ It is presumed his wife Elizabeth died in New Haven, as Thomas left his children in the custody of his steward Henry Gibbons, when he departed for England.⁶⁷ Gibbons proved unreliable and on 5 April 1644 Sgt. Jeffrey was granted custody of the three Trowbridge children and provided for their education.⁶⁸

Cite as you write!

Tip

Always Be Consistent!

The Right Cite

By Fact vs. Combined

Note for each fact	Note at end of sentence or paragraph
Source citation follows each fact.	Source citation follows a sentence or a paragraph.
Ideal for genealogical community.	Ideal for more narrative style.
Easy to see which reference goes with which text; very clear connection.	Must be sure to indicate within the citation which source applies to which fact.
Some people find it hard to follow text when note numbers appear frequently.	Consolidates footnotes and space, and decreases the number of notes.
	Notes are more time consuming to write; there's more room for error.

FIRST GENERATION

1. THOMAS¹ BRIGHAM, likely the son of John and Constance (Watson) Brigham of Holme-on-Spalding-Moor, Yorkshire;¹ born at England about 1603; died at Cambridge, Middlesex County, Massachusetts, 8 December 1653;² married by about 1641 MERCY _____.

Mercy married second at Sudbury, Middlesex County, Massachusetts, 1 March 1655/6, Edmund Rice. Edmund was buried at Sudbury in May 1663. Mercy married third perhaps at Marlborough, Middlesex County, Massachusetts, October or November 1664, William Hunt. William was buried at Marlborough October 1667. Mercy (____) (Brigham) (Rice) Hunt died at Marlborough 22 December 1693.³

Mercy (____) Brigham and her second husband Edmund Rice had two daughters. The History of the Brigham Family indicated these were Ruth (born at Sudbury 29 September 1659, who married Thomas Welles at Wethersfield, Hartford County, Connecticut, 20 June 1683), and Ann (born at Marlborough 19 November 1661). This latter child is actually a granddaughter of Edmund Rice's by his elder son Edward (from his first marriage). The deed research of Mary Lovering Holman proved that the other daughter, older than Ruth, was Lydia Rice, "the younger," as Edmund Rice already had one living daughter of that same name by his first marriage. Lydia Rice the younger, who was born at Sudbury around 1657, married, probably at Boston around 1678, James Hawkins, Jr.⁴ Thus the two daughters of Edmund and Mercy (____) (Brigham) Rice were Lydia (Rice) Hawkins and Ruth (Rice) Welles.

² The English origins of Thomas Brigham are discussed in the The History of the Brigham Family, vol. 2, pp. 19-28 (hereafter HBF), by J. Gardner Bartlett. Although there is no direct statement calling Thomas the son of John and Constance, this is the most logical spot for Thomas and his brother Sebastian to fit in the family with whom they emigrated. ANCESTORS OF MINOT TULLY PRATT (1872-1908)

THIS QUADRANT OF THE ANCESTRY of George Rufus Brown and Alice Nelson Pratt presents the forebears of Alice's father, Minot Tully Pratt, following the surname lines of Allerton, Cushman, Hinckley, Lothrop, Lyon, Mather, Maverick, Morgan, Pratt, Priest/Coombs, Tully, and Whittlesey. Minot's ancestry is almost entirely English and includes some of the earliest families to settle Plymouth and Saybrook Colonies, now part of the states of Massachusetts and Connecticut respectively.

Allerton. Isaac Allerton was "one of the busiest and most complicated men in early New England."¹ Born in England, in 1620 he and his first wife, Mary Norris of Newbury, Berkshire, England, and three children left Leiden, Holland aboard the Mayflower, bound for the New World. Isaac's later in-laws, William and Mary Brewster, were also aboard the ship. Mary died shortly after landing at Plymouth, Massachusetts, and Isaac married Fear Brewster sometime between 1623 and 1627. After the death of John Carver in 1621, Isaac Allerton was made assistant to the chosen governor, William Bradford. As a merchant and representative of the colony, Isaac appears in the records of European possessions along the Atlantic seaboard, including Newfoundland, New Netherland, New Sweden, Virginia, Barbados, and Curaçao. He maintained residences simultaneously at several locations.²

Cushman. Robert Cushman was a grocer in England and later a woolcomber in Leiden.³ Beginning in 1617, he lobbied tirelessly on behalf of the Leiden congregation;

He worked alongside John provisions for the Mayflower, arrived in Plymouth in 1621 permanently to England in his return from England in

Comparison

There is no documented date of arrival for Edward. His last child was baptized in England in 1634, so it's likely that he left sometime between the birth of this child and his initial appearance in New England records (June 25, 1640, when he served on both a grand jury and a trial jury in Saco).^A A 1685 deposition by his son Francis, however, suggests that Edward had been in the area for several years at that point.¹⁷ In 1685, Francis gave a deposition regarding 11 acres between two creeks at Sturgeon Creek, land^B that was given to his father, Edward, by Thomas Gorges, deputy governor before July 25, 1643.¹⁸ Francis stated that his father had lived there for fifty years, which sets the approximate year of Edward's immigration as 1635.¹⁹ The record shows that on the date of July 25, 1643, Edward purchased 100 acres at Sturgeon Creek from Gorges with the payment price stipulated as 5 shillings per year and that he sold the same land to Antipas Maverick on June 23, 1647, for 45 pounds. Both deeds were recorded January 12, 1652.²⁰

Edward's occupation in England is unknown, but his roles in colonial government and his well-formed signature indicate he was educated. In Maine he served as a magistrate, councilor, and juryman—all positions held by men with some social status and education. The Trelawney Papers, one of the best documentary sources of seventeenth-century Maine, mention that "Edward Small, one of the founders of Piscataway, appears to have been a man of respectable position and some talent."²¹

^A Because early passenger lists are so scarce, establishing a date of immigration relies on a person's first appearance in public record in the new location.

^B He sold this house to Mr. Antipas Maverick, suing him in 1649 for a debt of 20 pounds, likely the balance.

THE PORTABLE GENEALOGIST 4

Reference Notes

By Kyle Hurst, Genealogist of the Newbury Street Press

Introduction

Citations—notes that tell your readers the sources of your information—are an important part of every genealogy and family history, regardless of whether you think your primary audience will be family members or members of the genealogical community.

This Portable Genealogist will help you determine how to formulate your reference notes.

Basic Guidelines

1. Include the author's name.
2. Include the title of the work.

Placement

Decide how many lines you need for each citation. You can create a separate page for citations, and you can place them at the end of each chapter or at the end of the book.

Citation

The first time you cite a source, include the author's name, the title, and the date.

Books

Martin
Author (if name first)

Subsequent citations should include only the author's name and the page number.

Hollick,

If you do use a page number, include it.
