Sibley's Harvard Graduates, 14:49.

Samuel Holden Parsons
 (Harvard, 1756)

General Samuel Holden Parsons was born at Lyme, Connecticut, on May 14, 1737, a son of the Reverend Jonathan (Yale 1729) and Phebe (Griswold) Parsons. When he was ten, his father was installed over the First Presbyterian Church of Newburyport, and it was from that town that he was admitted to Harvard. At college his closest friends were his classmate Walter and John Adams (A.B. 1755). While an undergraduate he suffered from the stomach trouble which was to plague him all of his life, and obtained permission "to be out of Commons because he could not eat meat." In April, 1756, the Corporation voted:

That, if Walter and Parsons, Senior Sophisters, shou'd have leave to go (according to their present desire) as officers in the expedition to Crown Point, we consent that they may not withstanding such their absence have their degrees of Bachelor of Arts next Commencement, providing they have the consent, for their going upon the said expedition from their parents.¹

Apparently the permission was not forthcoming, for Sam was a respondent at their first Commencement. For their second, he prepared the affirmative of "An male Gubernans potestate regnandi jure privari possit?"

As this topic would suggest, Parsons' interest was the law, which he read with his uncle, Matthew Griswold of Lyme. On September 10, 1761, he married a neighbor, Mehetabel, daughter of Richard and Deborah (Ely) Mather. He had already been admitted to the New London Bar, and in October, 1762, the town of Lyme began to send him regularly to the Connecticut Assembly. Among his assignments were those to audit the colony accounts and to investigate the state of learning, government, and finances at Yale College. He had a certain interest in things intellectual, for he subscribed for the 1772 edition of Morton's New England's Memorial. In 1768 he was appointed a Justice of the Peace. He was most interested in his appointment to the legislative committee on the Susquehanna claims, for he had already visited Wilkes-Barre and purchased a settlement-right there. The election of a lieutenant governor and chief justice favorable to his plans was much to be desired, and in 1769, to the startled amazement of the other faction, he "proved himself a better Politician than all the Rest of the Colony and brought in his unkle Griswold to the disappointment of many and the Mortification of others."² As one

Complete List of Active Hereditary Societies

Included in these pages are the known names, addresses, websites, founding dates, descriptions and membership guidelines for active hereditary societies of the United States of America. The listings are alphabetical, and the index links at the bottom of this text will direct you to the page you seek.

The information contained herein may occasionally become outdated. The HSC webmaster welcomes notification of new societies, as well as updated information regarding existing societies. If any information here is incorrect, or the officers of any society listed here wish certain elements to be altered or removed, please contact the HSC webmaster, and he will do so in a timely manner.

The criteria used in determining whether an organization is an hereditary society is comprised of several factors. The nature of, and requirements for membership, the structure of the organization and the scope of membership allowance are all elements HSC evaluates. Some lineage society recognize descent from a single, specific ancestor. Because of the growing number of such organizations, HSC has designated a separate page for singular ancestor societies, which can be accessed here. In exceptional cases, allowances are made for singular ancestor societies on the complete society listings if it is determined that the ancestor is of sufficient, historical significance (ie. Charlemagne, Thomas Jefferson, Mayflower passengers, etc.)

Furthermore, HSC presents the information included on this website, simply as a consolidated list of recognized lineage societies. In no way does HSC validate the integrity of the genealogical standards or membership qualifications of any specific group, but simply presents the information as a source of data. We encourage anyone interested in membership to carefully evaluate the reputation and genealogical standards of each, respective lineage society before becoming a member or making payment or contributions.

Furthermore, those societies which list "membership is by invitation only" should not be contacted concerning membership. This is not only inappropriate, but will significantly hinder a potential member's future candidacy in a society. HSC strongly advises against contacting those societies, except in cases of peripheral research or through members of that society.
